KELLOGG ON TRIAL.

Charged With Conspiracy as a Member of E. S. Dean Co.

New York, March 12.—The trial of James R. Kellogg, the first of the E. S. Dean Company to face a jury, began today in Part 1 of the Court of General Sessions before Receiver Goff. The E. S. Dean company conducted a disreputable pool in stock trading. When it failed in April, 1895, creditors to the amount of more than a million dollars suffered heavy losses and were swindled. March 20, last year, the Grand Jury indicted Myron L. Bernard, Charles Kellogg and James R. Kellogg for grand larceny and conspiracy. They pleaded not guilty and were admitted to bail.

Alfred R. Gould, who is also said to have been connected with the Dean concern, was present in court to have his bail fixed on the indictment returned by the Special Grand Jury, charged with participation in the conspiracy to injure the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. Bail was fixed at $20,000, to be paid at once deposited in cash with the Comptroller.

NO CESSION IN ARRIVAL OF BUYERS.

Merchants From Missouri, Illinois and the Southwest flock here to make purchases.

GOOD CROP OUTLOOK HELPS.

Many Original Orders Are Diplomatized on the Bright Wheat Prospects and High Price of Cotton.

The arrival of buyers still continues, but nearly all of the Texas merchants who have been in the market have returned to their homes, and the visitors from the Lone Star State are growing fewer in numbers each day. Arkansas, however, is still well represented, and there are a number of Missouri merchants in the city.

The prospects of a bumper wheat crop, and the high price of cotton, have caused many of the early buyers from the Southwest to duplicate their original orders, and jobbers in many cases are finding trouble in securing the goods to fill these increased orders.

Wholesale grocers report an unusually good business, as the visit of so many merchants from all parts of the country to this city has attracted increased attention to this market, and orders are pouring in at an unprecedented rate.

Clothing jobbers also report a phenomenal business, and factories are running night and day to keep up with their orders.

At the headquarters of the Interstate Meatmen's Association the rush was not heavy yesterday, but the trade is still kept busy receiving and packing the meat.
